

Bucks Party Boars

Hunting on a NT Piggin' Safari should be one thing that all pig hunters should have on their bucket list, explains Rachele Barbaro.

My husband-to-be is an extremely keen hunter; so keen that he just returned from a week long Bucks party in the NT hunting pigs! I have never known anyone with such a passion!

I know how much he loves the bush and hunting and I try to share his interest with him (to a point of course, lol). We love going out on his quad together and we even had a 'hunting photo shoot' done as part of his marriage proposal when he proposed to me last year. When it came to thinking about what to do for his bucks, I knew it was not going to be an 'Ordinary Bucks'. My fiancé Emanuel Pentes and four other passionate hunters including cousin Billy and friends Telly, Ray and George packed their bags, guns, gators and made their way to Arnhemland for a week long hunting adventure with the guys from Tropical Hunting Safaris.

They started their mornings at 5.30am and would often hunt right through until 1am the following morning. Their Guides Peter and Mick were great and the boys learnt so much.

They managed to bag a whopping sixty five pigs and the attached photos speak louder than my words ever could. They were so proud and impressed with their efforts and were glowing when they returned home. They trekked through swamps, creeks and showered with cane toads and monster mozzies and they loved every minute of the experience. 🐷

The array of photos show the crew of five had a ball on their safari. With many good tusky boars taken, the Bucks Party was a memorable one and something that will be brought up on the wedding day, I'm sure!
